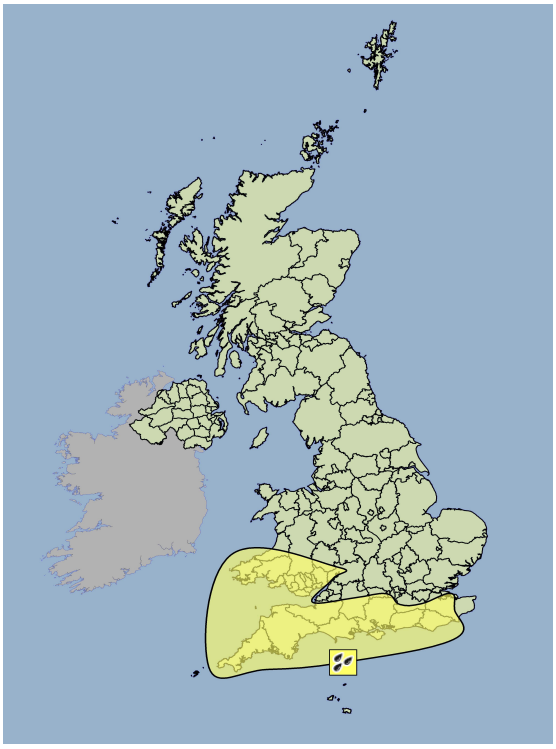
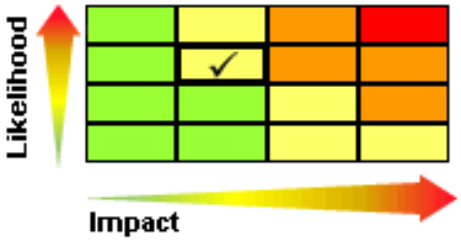
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Another active Atlantic frontal system and deepening area of low pressure is expected to push northeastwards across western UK on Wednesday. A combination of strong winds and very moist air will give locally significant rainfall accumulations especially over south-facing coasts and hills. The more persistent rain should clear eastwards later on Wednesday and overnight into Thursday.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Alert of Rain

Valid from 06:00 on Wed, 01st Jan 2014 until 23:59 on Wed, 01st Jan 2014

Further rain, heavy at times, will spread quickly northeastwards on Wednesday. Rainfall totals are expected to be widely 10-20 mm, but as much as 30 mm over some south facing coasts and hills. South or southwesterly gales with gusts 50-60 mph on coasts and hills will accompany the rain.

With ground already saturated over much of this area, the public should be aware of the risk of further localised flooding.
